

A Father's Day Poem

by Chris Fice

Father's Day is a special day; we like to celebrate
The man who is our role model, and sometimes our best mate
Different dads and fathers, take many a different form
And who am I to even say, what even is the norm
Some dads are step, and some dads are grand
Some live far across the land
Some dads are still with us; some have passed away
Some of us may find it, very difficult today
We pray for those who find this day, much harder than the rest
We pray for everyone who is here, who hasn't been so blessed
We celebrate the men today, who've helped to shape our life
Who helped to teach us lessons, and helped us through our strife
If you want to see the model, of perfect fatherhood
Look no further than the Lord, every-thing from him is good
It's he who gives us everything, that we'll ever need
So often we repay him, with rebellion and greed
But he loves us anyway, in spite of how we act
He loves us unconditionally, and that is a fact
Just like the greatest father, anyone will ever know
He provides for each of us, and helps us as we grow
Thank you to all the men, for everything you do
Even if you aren't a father, I am still talking to you
All the kindness and the love you show, to those of us in need
You make a difference in our lives, you make us better indeed
Try as we might to make a difference, we'll never live up to God
But we'll continue to do our best, and be cool with a dad bod
Thank you men, you do so much, and I would like to say
That we appreciate each of you, happy Father's Day.
